PROs taboo in 'The Times'

WE reproduce, without comment, the following letter by the editor of The Times of India to his resident editor:

"The traffic of PROs representing various political, social, cultural and business interests has increased hugely during the past few months. This perturbs the normal functioning of the office. The countrywide of these PROs encroach our time. Moreover, their duty is to plant stories or to get a news reportives analysis claimed in favour of the interests they represent. This goes counter to our professional interests.

"PROs must be strongly discouraged from posing such 'country calls'. If they have a handsome press release to

■ Safe Seats: a police dog sniffing for bombs at Chesham Town Hall before Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's speech

Prime Minister. But in the circles in which you move there is a person called Devi Lal, who calls me an agent of the capitalist and an anti-national element. I get very angry when he hears that you have given me this award he will write another letter from the village post office, Bangalore.

Tuning into BBC radio

WE do not seem to see anything, and about Deshabhai's speech, not after the independence and... identified her phone as 'unknown'. In fact, the Vatican was all for banning the comments Madonna did in Italy last week.

Said the Vatican: The Pope was particularly outraged because Madonna went on stage and posed around wearing clerical robes with a... underwar underrobes.

But the Mosley warrior replied: "Everytime I give a stage I pay to Cook. I want people to look at this as a show of love, life and humanity."

Which, the Vatican contends, is all hounding and garbage, because Madonna's shows are a way of making a lot of money.

Football writers of West Germany played Argentina won 5-0... and had a man sent off.

'Mr. Ten Per Cent'

PAKISTAN, it would seem, is also having its building and real-estate boom in high quarters. And Ali Zardari, otherwise known as Mr. Zardari, has acquired a third name among his countrymen — Mr. Ten Per Cent.

That, it is alleged, is the commission he takes on government business deals. Coincidentally, Mr. Zardari's business is also building construction.

The opposition has been demanding an inquiry into some of his business deals, though it is not clear how this will help. Because the person inquiring would be Mr. Hakim Ali Zardari, the young Mr. Zardari's father, whom the prime minister has appointed head of the parliamentary public accounts committee, the corruption watchdog.

"Henry, are we really rich or do we just sound rich?"
